THINGS TO KNOW

Rocky, aka Rakim Mayers, pleaded no guilty to the June 30 incident.

A teenager told a Swedish court on Tuesday that he was kicked and punched by rapper A$AP Rocky and two of his entourage during an altercation outside a hamburger restaurant in Stockholm last month.

The 30-year-old performer, producer and model, whose real name is Rakim Mayers, pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault on the first day of a trial that prompted President Donald Trump to intervene on the artist's behalf.

Mayer was detained on July 3 in connection with a street brawl on June 30 and later charged with assault causing actual bodily harm.

Outlining his case using videos from security cameras and witnesses' mobile phones, prosecutor Daniel Suneson said that following an altercation in central Stockholm, Mayers threw 19-year-old Mustafa Jafari to the ground, after which he and two of his entourage kicked and punched him.

The prosecutor said a bottle was used to hit Jafari, who suffered cuts and bruises.

Jafari told the court

he was pushed and grabbed by the neck by Mayers' bodyguard outside a restaurant and followed the rapper's group to get back his headphones. He said he was then hit on the head with a bottle and kicked and punched while on the ground.

"We did not want to fight," Jafari said. "I said to them I was a nice guy, not a bad guy. I did not touch any of these three."

PRISON CLOTHES

Earlier, Mayers' lawyer told the judge his client, sitting in prison clothes of a green T-shirt and trousers, pleaded not guilty to the charge of assault and had acted in self-defense.

"Rakim Mayers thought that these people ... were attacking his bodyguard and it is on those grounds he subsequently acts," lawyer Slobodan Jovicic told the court.

Mayers will be questioned when the trial resumes on Thursday.

Mayers has said Jafari provoked him and his two companions, who are also charged with assault and pleaded not guilty. If convicted at the Stockholm district court, they could face up to two years in jail.

The case has drawn huge media attention, forcing the trial to be moved to a secure courtroom where more than 50 journalists as well as Mayers' mother watched proceedings.

Mayers' detention before his trial prompted angry responses from fans and other celebrities, including Kim Kardashian and Rod Stewart.

Trump had asked Swedish Prime Minister Stefan Lofven to help free Mayers, and tweeted messages saying he was disappointed in Lofven and demanding: "Treat Americans fairly!"

Trump had said he would personally vouch for Mayers' bail. Sweden does not have a bail system.

Sweden's judiciary is independent of the political system and Lofven has said he will not influence the rapper's case.

U.S. diplomat Robert C. O'Brien was in court at the request of the White House.

"One of the most important tasks of the Department of State and U.S. embassies and consulates abroad is to provide assistance to U.S. citizens who are detained abroad," a spokeswoman at the U.S. Embassy in Stockholm said.

Swedish fan Ivan Waliullah said: "I'm here to show support," adding he thought the three were being charged unfairly.

Mayers, best known for his song "Praise the Lord", was in Stockholm for a concert. He has canceled several shows across Europe due to his detention.

Before his arrest, Mayers uploaded videos on Instagram of the moments before the alleged assault, saying two men were following his team and he did not want any trouble.

Mayers shot to fame with his 2011 debut "Live.Love.A$AP." His latest album "Testing" reached No. 4 on the Billboard 200 charts on its release last year. REUTERS

Ellis to step down as Team USA head coach

2 Jill Ellis, who led the U.S. women's national soccer team to consecutive World Cup victories, will step down as head coach in October, U.S. Soccer said on Tuesday. Ellis, 52, said her decision to step aside as coach of the reigning World Cup champions after its victory tour was in line with the timeline she envisioned when she was first named to the job in May 2014. "The timing is right to move on and the program is positioned to remain at the pinnacle of women's soccer," Ellis, who has a record of 102-7-18, said in a statement. "Change is something I have always embraced in my life and for me and my family this is the right moment." At this year's World Cup in France, Ellis guided her squad to victory in each of their seven games in what was arguably the greatest achievement in the program's history, three years after they missed out on a medal at the 2016 Rio Olympics. REUTERS

Senator proposes bill to ban Snapchat 'Snapstreaks'

3 A bill introduced by a Republican senator on Tuesday aims to curb overuse of social media use by banning Snapchat's Snapstreak feature, among elements on other social media networks. The provision to ban the streak feature on Snap Inc's photo-sharing platform Snapchat is part of Sen. Josh Hawley's "Social Media Addiction Reduction Technology (SMART) Act" to ban "addictive and deceptive techniques" by social media companies, a statement said. The Snapstreak feature displays the number of days a Snapchat user has continuously sent photos to another user. If a streak goes unattended for 24 hours, it disappears from the user's app. Some users are so dedicated to their streaks that Snapchat has a form on its website to recover lost streaks that may have disappeared erroneously. REUTERS

Second Ebola case detected in Congo's main city

4 A second case of Ebola was detected on Tuesday in the eastern Congolese city of Goma, a local health official said, increasing concern the virus could establish a foothold in the densely populated area close to the Rwandan border. Goma's first Ebola case was detected in mid-July, prompting the World Health Organization (WHO) to warn that the spread of the disease could accelerate. The epidemic has killed more than 1,700 people since it was declared almost a year ago, becoming the second-worst outbreak on record. The latest person with the disease started developing symptoms on July 22, after arriving from a mining area outside the city, the health official quoted the head of Congo's Ebola response team, Jean-Jacques Muyembe, as saying in an official statement. Health officials believe the patient, a man, is not connected to the first case in Goma. REUTERS

MTA partners with tech companies to improve the transit system

The transit authority and the Partnership for New York City teamed up to create a Transit Tech Lab.

BECCA GLASSER-BAKER
Rebecca.Glasser@metro.us

On Tuesday, the MTA and Partnership for New York City announced the completion of the Transit Tech Lab, which will allow tech companies to test out innovative products to help improve transit services.

Patrick Foye, MTA chairman and CEO, said in a press release that “we are eager to pilot these mobility technologies over the next year to improve subway and bus service for riders across New York City.”

Around 100 companies participated in the global contest; only six finalists were chosen to test their technologies with the MTA. A press release stated that throughout the course of eight weeks, the finalists worked closely with the MTA to test out the products and ultimately four made the cut. These four will begin pilot programs.

Two companies — Axon Vibe and Veovo — began their subway pilot programs on Tuesday, while Preteckt and Remix also began their pilot programs for buses.

Axon Vibe developed a smartphone app that helps riders plan their trips and lets them know if there have been any disturbances on that line. This app will also provide alternatives routes in case of any issues.

Veovo will measure the number of passengers moving through a station, which helps the MTA improve where more trains and staff need to be.

Preteckt will help predict system failures for at least 48 hours before the check engine light goes on. This will help the MTA with which buses need to be removed from service and help reduce maintenance time, reduce delays, and other interruptions.

Remix's software will help develop and assist with the bus network redesign. Their software will also help create easy-to-read maps.

Trump condemns slavery in Jamestown speech

The president's speech was interrupted by a heckling Virginia legislator.

President Donald Trump, under fire in D.C. for verbal attacks on lawmakers of color, condemned American slavery on Tuesday at the 400th anniversary of the first legislative assembly in Virginia and was briefly interrupted by a protesting state legislator.

Trump gave a scripted speech at the site of the first legislative assembly in Jamestown, Virginia, after touring the Jamestown church and a mock 1619 village.

In his remarks, he honored the first people to form a government in what would become the United States but also recognized their importation of slaves in 1619 in the same region.

"It was the beginning of a barbaric trade of human lives," he said. "Today in honor, we remember every sacred soul who suffered the horrors of slavery and the anguish of bondage."

Trump's comments, in which he also honored African-Americans' contributions to U.S. history and quoted civil rights leader Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., followed two weeks of incendiary remarks about the four House "squad" members and Rep. Elijah Cummings, all of whom have been sharp critics of the president.

Trump has blasted Cummings for not doing more to improve the plight of Baltimore, a largely black city, which

"The man is unfit for office and unfit to partake in a celebration of democracy, representation and our nation's history of immigrants."

Democratic Virginia Delegate Ibraheem Samirah

he said is "rodent-infested." Trump has faced accusations of racism and bigotry for the remarks.

Virginia's black state legislators had said they would boycott Trump's appearance after his harsh comments about the members of Congress. A statement from the Virginia Legislative Black Caucus said it was "impossible to ignore the emblem of hate and disdain that the president represents" while he continues to "promulgate policies that harm marginalized communities and use racist and xenophobic rhetoric."

Trump's address in Jamestown was interrupted briefly by Democratic Virginia Delegate Ibraheem Samirah, who shouted and held up a sign that said: "Go back to your corrupted home. Deport hate. Reunite my family and all those shattered by systemic discrimination."

Samirah, a Palestinian-American dentist, later said in a Twitter post that he had disrupted Trump's speech at Jamestown "because nobody's racism and bigotry should be excused for the sake of being polite."

"The man is unfit for office and unfit to partake in a celebration of democracy, representation and our nation's history of immigrants," Samirah said.

The Virginia Republican Party later released a statement accusing Samirah of being anti-Semitic.

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

“Don’t Get ANY Surgery Until You See This...”

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best “Treatment Formula” For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going to be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

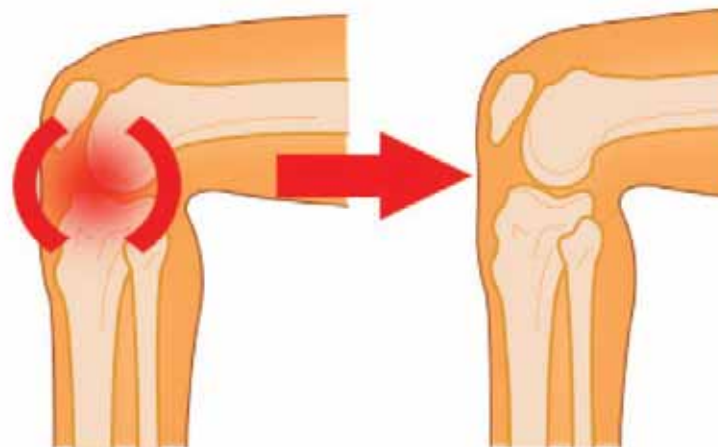

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD “Treatment Formula” A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW...

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these “gel injections” without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patient. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our “Treatment Formula.”

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action... step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

Fans to sue after soccer icon Ronaldo sits out friendly in S. Korea

Soccer fans in South Korea are taking legal action to seek compensation after Cristiano Ronaldo failed to play in a friendly during Juventus' pre-season tour in Seoul last week.

Ronaldo had been contracted to play at least 45 minutes against K League All Stars, according to event organizers The Fasta Inc., but ultimately sat out the entire game at a packed Seoul World Cup Stadium.

An online community was formed on South Korea's Naver web portal to protest Ronaldo's lack of participation, and two members reached out to lawyer Kim Min-ki to file a lawsuit against the match organizers.

"Many purchased tickets to see Ronaldo. The Fasta publicized that the company had a deal with Juventus which stipulated Ronaldo would play for at least 45 minutes and that Ronaldo would hold a fan signing event," Kim told Reuters.

Phone calls to The Fasta by Reuters were not answered, while officials at Juventus did not immediately reply to requests for comment.

The lawsuit is seeking compensation of 70,000 won ($59) per ticket, 1,000 won for the ticket commission fee, and 1 million won ($847) each for compensation for "mental anguish." REUTERS

THROWING GARBAGE OUT OF YOUR CAR WINDOW

It is almost unthinkable what I observe here in the city regularly. What kind of people toss trash out of their car window? You show that you don't care, that you live in a dump, and you're adding to the problem. I have seen food, bottles and cups thrown out of vehicle windows. Unbelievable. And you can see it almost every day. Where is your pride? Where is your self-respect? Thanks for setting an example for the children. I even gave a lecture to one man after he did such a thing. I reminded him about what pollution does to our Earth. The wife apologized for her husband's behavior. That was nice. I now pick up trash sometimes and toss it in the waste can where it belongs. Let's set an example for the city to do a better job.

Sagittarius Be careful with anyone who appears to be acting strange or is trying to sell you something you don't need or want. Only make a move, change or purchase if it's absolutely necessary.

Cancer Share your opinions and beliefs only with like-minded souls. If you tangle with someone who has a different agenda, you will end up losing ground. Fight for your rights.

Capricorn Don't expect everyone to like your actions, but do your best to help them understand your motives. How you handle others will affect the way things turn out.

Leo You can try something new without going overboard. Keep your cash in a safe place until you find something in which you really want to invest your time and money.

Aquarius Don't let your temper get the better of you. Poor choices will be the result of acting too quickly or making assumptions. Concentrate on personal growth, not on changing others.

Virgo You are overdue for a change. Look over the possibilities and take a step in a direction that interests you. Meeting exciting people or sharing with a loved one is encouraged.

'Unmasking Jihadi John' finds out how ISIS recruits everyday people

The new HBO documentary premieres tonight at 8 p.m.

patrick.king@metro.us

When reading or watching reports on some of the horrific acts of terrorism being committed around the globe, one central question usually comes to mind: What makes someone subscribe to such evil and dangerous beliefs? The new HBO documentary "Unmasking Jihadi John: The Anatomy of a Terrorist," premiering tonight at 8 p.m., aims to find out this answer. Director Anthony Wonke spent years delving into the background of the London-born Mohammed Emwazi, who grew up to become one of the most notorious and brutal ISIS terrorists in Syria and was one of the men who carried out beheadings in 2014 and 2015, including that of American journalist James Foley.

The film features a detailed account of Emwazi's upbringing and includes interviews with aid workers and journalists who survived being held hostage and the stories of those who were executed under his captivity. Wonke first heard of ISIS after finding out that one of the fathers of the children he had covered in his film "Syria: Children on the Frontline" had been kidnapped by the organization. He later learned about Jihadi John like the rest of us: through social media and news headlines. He felt the public needed to know more.

"I think one of the things that you realized is that the story of Jihadi John was only being serviced in the news and the current-affairs arena. It hadn't been explored more deeply in a resonate way, more than just the polarizing headlines," explains Wonke on why he felt as though he needed to tell Emwazi's story. "It's a very interesting way of not only looking into his radicalization and what happened — how a boy from Northwest London who went to a very good university in a very short period of time could be radicalized and groomed to such a degree that he would commit these barbaric acts. Not only by looking at that single narrative do you understand more about him and what happened to him as an individual, but it asks much bigger questions about the geopolitical context of all of this. How did this happen? Why was it that this terrorist state was able to grow as much as it did and what were the tools that enabled them to grow? As a filmmaker, you look at this as very rich terrain and a very important subject that needs to be told."

Wonke also got testimony from operatives who helped to bring Emwazi to justice as well as reporters who helped to gather information on his identity. One of those journalists is writer-producer Richard Kerbaj, who covered this story as well as the ongoing conflict in the Middle East for the Sunday Times.

"I've been reporting on national security for over a decade, particularly covering Islamic extremism," says Kerbaj. "The video of Jim Foley was broadcasted on social media and it quickly became evidence that ISIS was not your normal Islamic extremist organization. They had this ability to weaponize propaganda and leverage platforms on social media to push out messages of both hate and messages about why you should go out and fight with them. That's how they would start recruiting people. I wanted to tell a story about ISIS, but particularly I wanted to tell a story about this character. Of course, Jihadi John would go on to encapsulate and embody everything that is evil about this terrorist organization. What made his story so compelling was, he was a nice man with a British accent who became known to the world when he stood by Jim Foley, an American journalist who was trying to inform the world about the brutality of ISIS."

The captivating documentary "Unmasking Jihadi John: The Anatomy of a Terrorist" premieres tonight at 8 p.m. on HBO.

Wild connections

Director John Downer gives Metro the scoop on the groundbreaking new docuseries "Serengeti."

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

Have you ever wondered what it would be like to delve into a pride of lions or a herd of elephants and really get an up close look at the relationships and connections these animals have as a family?

Now you can with Discovery's latest revolutionary series "Serengeti" directed by nature documentary expert John Downer. Downer's dream was to get an intimate look at these magnificent animals that call Serengeti home and explore what makes them just like us.

With incredible new technology and years of filming with a dramatized look rather than just a view from afar, Downer and the team working on the fascinating docuseries achieved just that. Downer sat down with Metro to give the scoop on the ground-breaking new series.

Why did you choose to study the animals that inhabit Serengeti?

I think Serengeti is like nowhere else on Earth. I am still so connected with it, I've made so many films there in the past. But the reason it draws you back is the fact that those animals are some of the most charismatic in the world. They live literally cheek-by-jowl so they interact in a way that you don't get anywhere else, these are just incredible animals—every single one of them is a star. A lion's a star, an elephant's a star, a hyena is—normally less of a star, but still an incredible supporting role. We wanted to look at these animals in a way that hadn't really been done before and look at the connections between them, so we needed a place with loads of connections, and they're interacting all of the time. [We also wanted] a look into their family lives. Every one of those animals has an incredible story to tell and they are really complex. What we wanted to do was look at that behavior in a human way. Each of those animals and the way they interact and behave are so similar to our own lives.

Do you think this unique approach will help audiences connect more with the animals?

That's certainly our intention, I think it is a way to relate to them because so often natural history—and I've been making it for over 30 years now—can be distancing. What we try to do is to explain the behavior and the emotional drive and the relationship, and all of this is based on their biology. It's quite hard to articulate in a cold documentary. What we wanted was a dramatized depiction of those inter-relationships and their needs and desires and everything else that we relate too. That's why we're seeing those connections because those connections run deep, we just don't think they're there.

Can you tell me more about what filming techniques were used with "Serengeti"?

The whole style and intent was to go into the animal world rather than just see things from a distance. It was a chance to bring all of my experiences there—we used mainly what we call spy cameras which are a whole range of different cameras that can get close to those animals, even into a whole pride of lions. Such as a remote control buggy that is protected against the lions but can move among them. They very quickly get used to it and it just becomes part of the pride so you're getting incredibly intimate views. We were also able to utilize the latest stabilization camera technology which meant we could film on the move with different lenses from a vehicle without the bumps from the movement you get normally. So you have this incredibly energetic and close feel to transport you there. That was a dream of mine, it's been a dream from the very beginning.

Ultimately what do you hope audiences take away from the series?

We as early humans walked the plains of the Serengeti with those animals and at that time we just considered those animals the same as us, just other animals—we were connected. We've become separated now in our own worlds, and what we wanted to do was re-ignite that connection and realize that these animals, when you delve into their lives, connections, troubles and everything else; they're so like us. That recognition should give us empathy, they're more than just animals, they're our close kin.

"Serengeti" premieres Aug. 4 on Discovery Channel.

Is Severino playing part in Yankees' trade deadline woes?

The Yankees have yet to pick up a much-needed starter.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

It's unlike the New York Yankees and General Manager Brian Cashman to toe the line of coming up empty at a trade deadline when there is such a glaring need visible before the stretch run.

But with the Major League Baseball trade deadline just hours away on Wednesday at 4 p.m. ET, the Yankees have yet to pick up a starting pitcher to bolster a shaky rotation.

The pitching market has been an enigmatic one this summer as the availability of big names waivers or moves elsewhere.

One of the team's biggest trade targets, Marcus Stroman, was sent to the Mets, who are not in a pennant race nor nearly as desperate for consistent arms.

The San Francisco Giants look as though they won't deal Madison Bumgarner — one of the game's greatest postseason pitchers — after a summer hot streak that throttled the organization back toward playoff contention.

Then there have been varying degrees of interest surrounding Trevor Bauer of the Cleveland Indians, Mike Minor of the Texas Rangers, Robbie Ray of the Arizona Diamondbacks and his teammate, Zack Greinke.

Despite their usual standing as a major player in the trade market — and as an always-attractive destination — the Yankees are not favored to land any of those arms. At least, at the moment.

Cashman would have some explaining to do if the Yankees whiff on a starter. And the chances

Yankees ace Luis Severino is expected to return from a lat injury in September. GETTY IMAGES of that happening seem to increase with each passing minute.

A report from the New York Daily News on Monday revealed that the Yankees may pivot their game plan and acquire another big bullpen arm. That doesn't necessarily portray the sense of urgency that most Yankees fans were hoping for this summer.

Obviously, there is still time to pull off that all-important trade for a starter, but could the organization be looking at the impending return of Luis Severino as a later trade-deadline acquisition?

That remains to be seen, for now.

Yankees manager

Aaron Boone provided an update on the injured ace over the weekend, stating that Severino could begin throwing off a mound within the next week.

The 25-year-old right-hander has not thrown a single pitch in the majors this season as he continues to recover from a lat strain.

As it stands, Severino could be back by September, giving the Yankees a month or so to reacclimate him to the majors for the postseason.

At his best, he was the undisputed ace of the Yankees rotation last year, before the heavy workload of a full MLB season wore him out in the second half. Should Severino return promptly, he'll be as fresh as ever for the final month of the season and the playoffs, which could be seen as the best add-on the Yankees could make given the circumstances.

For the time being, another bullpen arm would allow the Yankees to keep experimenting with openers for the time being if Boone loses faith in his rotation — especially with CC Sabathia on the 10-day IL.

Then when Severino returns, the starting staff has a one-month tryout to prove they can contribute to World Series title No. 28.

Yankees must be wary of potential Robbie Ray trade

If the Yankees are, in fact, gung-ho on acquiring a starting pitcher before the trade deadline, they must be wary of Arizona Diamondbacks left-hander Robbie Ray.

The 27-year-old is one of the biggest names left on the market. However, his standing is largely based on a 2017 season in which he went 15-5 with a 2.89 ERA.

Since then, he hasn't been able to regain that form. Since the start of the 2018 season, his ERA has swelled by over 100 points, to 3.92.

Delving deeper into the numbers reveals an even more concerning trend this year as Ray ranks near the bottom of several advanced pitching categories among 39 qualified National League pitchers.

ROBBIE RAY 2019 STATS, NL RANKINGS

ERA- 3.91 (21ST)
FIP*- 4.26 (26TH)
WALK%- 10.6 (36TH)
HR/9 INNINGS- 1.60 (37TH)

Rumors have circulated that the Yankees would give up Clint Frazier for Arizona Diamondbacks starter Robbie Ray. GETTY IMAGES

Yankees bullpen coach Mike Harkey — who was Ray's pitching coach in 2015 — remains high on the southpaw despite the concerning numbers.

"He's 100 times better than he was and he still has potential to be even better than that," Harkey said, per NJ.com. "I see him being a guy who can win 20 games at this level."

Harkey's glowing review of Ray might be a reason why the Yankees are still in the sweepstakes. Even more concerning, though, would be the potential return they would send to Arizona.

The Athletic's Peter Gammons reported on Tuesday morning that Clint Frazier could be sent to the Diamondbacks for either Ray or reliever Archie Bradley.

Considering the Yankees refused to give up their young outfielder last winter for Gerrit Cole, then of the Pittsburgh Pirates, it's puzzling to see why they would part with Frazier for much less.

Cole has been brilliant since being acquired by the Houston Astros, going 27-10 with a 2.90 ERA.

Frazier has been unable to crack the Yankees' lineup consistently, but he's still shown tons of promise. In 53 games this year, the 24-year-old is slashing .283/.330/.513 with 11 home runs and 54 RBI.

If the Yankees were to trade him, it would have to be for a pitcher with much better numbers than Ray's. Should this deal go down, however, it clearly reeks of panic.

Mets price for Zack Wheeler, Noah Syndergaard, Edwin Diaz remains high

The Mets are still dangling some prominent arms on the trade market.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

These are cagy times for the New York Mets.

After the acquisition of Marcus Stroman, they have one of the most imposing starting rotations in baseball.

But for a franchise that still has not portrayed a tangible direction and stuck to it, the Mets are still very much in the middle of trade talks involving Noah Syndergaard, Zack Wheeler, and closer Edwin Diaz.

It all might just be a smokescreen, though.

Multiple reports indicate that the Mets would have to be blown out of the water with a trade proposal to part with any three of their arms.

The baseball world was given an idea of what general manager Brodie Van Wagenen is looking for in the latest reports coming out of Boston.

In need of bullpen help, the Red Sox inquired about snagging Diaz from the Mets, but ESPN's Buster Olney

Trade talks surrounding Edwin Diaz have picked up over the past few days. GETTY IMAGES hinted that the Mets sons.

wanted outfielder Andrew Benintendi in return on ESPN's "Get Up!" (h/t NBC Sports Boston).

The 25-year-old left fielder is one of Boston's best young hitters, averaging .280 with 15 home runs over the past three sea-

Olney added that the Red Sox discussed including Jackie Bradley Jr. in a deal instead of Benintendi.

There seemed to be no traction as multiple reports on Tuesday morning indicated a deal would be unlikely.

That doesn't mean Diaz is safe from trade rumors just yet.

Mark Bowman of MLB.com reported that the Mets are continuing to scout the Atlanta Braves' top prospects with Diaz a more likely target than Wheeler.

The Braves have five top-100 prospects including outfielders Cristian Pache (No. 11) and Drew Waters (No. 27).

Olney revealed that the Tampa Bay Rays are also "doing background work" on Diaz.

Looking at the available starters, it seems as though Syndergaard trade talks have lost steam over the past 24 hours. New York's high asking price either has teams second-guessing or abandoning negotiations.

As for Wheeler, however, the Houston Astros remain the favorites to sign the right-hander as they are "working hard" to get a deal done, per The Athletic's Ken Rosenthal.

Wheeler will be a free agent following the 2019 season, but a deep Astros farm system would provide the chance of the Mets getting a solid return, regardless.
